

Million team Self-reflection

Sayed Zulfikar

Time: 05/10/2019 (Week9)

Role(s): User Experience Designer

1. What have I done since the last time reported?

I have decided to invest more than 10 hours per week in this project and I also have learned some of the basic of Django and Bootstrap framework. As a result, my velocity is skyrocketing. I have finished the user interface for all menu with all CRUD (Create, Read, Update, Delete) functions of it. I have shown it to the client, some of it were satisfying but some need revisions.

2. Self-reflection?

I know that coordination is a critical part in teamwork, but somehow this week I completely ignore it as I assume that the segregation of duty between frontend and backend team is already clear enough. Therefore, I keep developing the user interface without much discussing it to the backend team. As a result, my code cause some bugs to the backend team because I use a different approach with what they want. In the end, I need to re-write some of the code. This waste of time should not happen if only I spent little effort to ask the backend team about the approach that they want.

3. What is the planned until next time report?

I will continue to develop the user interface for all the features, fixing what needs to be fixed based on the client's feedback while keep coordinating with the backend team.